

Vison, Mission and Core Values

2026-2031

Provide Direction and Purpose

- Vision defines where the organization is going — the future it seeks to create.
- Mission defines why the organization exists and what it does today to move toward that future.
 - Without them, teams can be busy but not aligned. With them, effort becomes intentional and coordinated.
 - When people understand the bigger picture, their daily work has meaning beyond tasks and targets.

Drive Strategic Decision-Making

A strong vision and mission act as a filter for decisions:

- Does this initiative move us closer to our vision?
 - Does this partnership align with our mission?
 - Should we allocate resources here — or somewhere else?
- This clarity reduces confusion and prevents drift. Strategy becomes coherent rather than reactive.

They Align and Motivate Teams

People are more engaged when they understand why their work matters.

- A compelling vision inspires.
- A clear mission clarifies.

Together, they:

- Strengthen accountability
- Encourage cross-functional alignment
- Build shared ownership

When everyone is moving toward the same north star, collaboration improves dramatically.

They Shape Organizational Culture

Vision and mission influence:

- What behaviours are rewarded
- What trade-offs are acceptable
- How success is defined
- What the organization stands for

They create consistency in leadership decisions and establish cultural boundaries.

They Strengthen Brand and External Trust

Externally, they communicate:

- What the organization stands for
- Who it serves
- How it is different

Customers, investors, donors, and partners are more likely to trust and support organizations that have clarity of purpose.

They Enable Long-Term Sustainability

Organizations without a clear vision often chase short-term opportunities.

Organizations without a clear mission often lose focus.

- Together, vision and mission:
 - Anchor long-term growth
 - Prevent mission drift
 - Support resilience during uncertainty
 - Provide stability during leadership transitions

Closing Remark

- As we engage in this session, I want to leave us with one important reminder: alignment is more powerful than perfection.
- We may not agree on every word or every nuance, but what matters most is that we leave here committed to a shared direction. A vision only works if we collectively believe in it. A mission only matters if we are willing to stand behind it. And core values only have meaning if we live them consistently — especially when it is difficult.
